SUPERIOR COURT
Flores, Davis to assume vacancies in 2006

PHOENIX – Governor Janet Napolitano today nominated Phoenix attorney Lisa Daniel Flores and Maricopa County Court Commissioner Glenn Davis to fill two vacancies on the Maricopa County Superior Court.

Flores has spent most of her legal career in the public sector, working as counsel for the Governor under a previous administration, as an assistant attorney general specializing in civil law and as the state's Elections Director. Additionally, Flores provided guidance to the Arizona Health Care Cost Containment System (AHCCCS) as a consultant and once worked as a public defender for the city of Phoenix. She earned her undergraduate degree from the University of Tulsa in Oklahoma, and her juris doctorate from the University of Arizona's College of Law. Flores is a Republican.

Davis, currently serving as a special assignment commissioner on the court, was general counsel to the legislature's minority for ten years until 2004. He has spent a number of years in private practice, specializing in civil litigation matters. Davis is a longtime Arizonan and Democrat, and grew up in Yuma, where he attended Arizona Western College. He then went to school in Flagstaff at Northern Arizona University, where he earned his bachelor's in history and political science. He later received his law degree from California Western School of Law.

Both Flores and Davis will assume the bench in early 2006.
